This presentation provides an introduction to child psychological evaluation. Drawing upon accepted best practices within the field, participants will learn the practical benefits of psychological evaluations and how to apply evaluation results and recommendations in meeting a child's individual needs across settings (home, school, etc.). A variety of child evaluations and commonly used measures will be discussed. A list of community resources to assist with following up on recommendations will be disseminated.

T3 Short-Term Interventions CAN Make a Difference: Terri Eggers, EdS. M.S.C.J., Marcela J. Torres, Dale Scott Dobuler, C.P.M., Vickie Lopez Lukis

Teaching parenting skills, promoting literacy and opportunities for positive behaviors, training on effective techniques, as well as capitalizing on available partnerships can have far reaching effects. This workshop will provide participants with a free research-based parenting booklet and instructor's guide as a result of a partnership with DJJ, DOE and the Florida Institute on Family Involvement. Effective gender-responsive intervention strategies used throughout Florida in juvenile justice prevention/day treatment programs for girls will also be shared, as will a powerful program developed by an advocate for justice-system involved females. The Superintendent of the largest juvenile detention center in the nation will close with an example of how all these strategies can come together in a short-term secure setting.

◆ T4 Parenting with Common Sense-- Peggy B. Sapp, B.S.

The goal of the session is for participants to become more effective parents while relaxing, relating to and enjoying his/her children and family by understanding historical parenting; identifying the child's environment; learning to set boundaries and monitor behavior; and follow professional advice and innate wisdom simultaneously.

T5 Dealing with Bullies: A Proactive Approach for Children & Adults - Chuck Bryant, M.A.

We face bullies at all stages of life. Adults, especially in their role as behavioral models, can help young children, teens, and colleagues prevent bullying, and respond more constructively when it does occur. Based on The Peace Works Curricula, six components surveyed here offer activities and concepts to apply in everyday practical situations.

T6 Motivational Interviewing with Adolescents - Bretton C. Engle, Ph.D. & Elise Preira, B.A.

Motivational Interviewing is a therapeutic approach that explores clients' intrinsic motivation for behavior change by addressing and resolving ambivalence. Adolescents are often viewed as being particularly resistant to behavior change and the therapeutic process. This session will introduce MI techniques and demonstrate their use in engaging adolescents and encouraging change.
